Deadly Danger for Correspondents

This Is a Breach No Mind Can Span

Germany's arrest of two American newspaper correspondents since last week-end emphasizes the irreconcilable and rapidly widening breach between public opinion in these two countries. Likewise, it emphasizes the deadly peril hanging over every American foreign correspondent standing his duty under a totalitarian flag to report to the people back here fact rather than opinion, as demanded by newspaper tradition in a democracy.

7-Billion Bill for Britain Is Given Congress

U. S. Mustn't Be Stamped a 'Faltering Welcher,' Says Committee

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The House appropriations committee presented Congress today a tersely worded alternative Tuesday to give quick approval to the 7-billion-dollar British aid bill or let the U. S. be stamped a "faltering welcher."

The committee acted with speed after hearing Secretary Hull in testimony made public Tuesday advise "full out" aid for countries resisting aggression "lest would-be conquerors get a chance to deal with the U. S. as they have been dealing with Europe and Asia."

The appropriations committee asked that President Roosevelt's recommendation for the expenditure be approved with a strong change and a paraphrasing of another section.

For U. S. Defense
The change would provide that any defense article procured with the 7 billion dollars should be retained by a government department at the discretion of the president instead of being disposed directly to a foreign government.

The committee said at this point: "Obviously if our own need at any point in the program should precipitously become more important than the furnishing of aid to a country whose defense the president has deemed vital to the defense of the U. S., the right should exist to retain and use for our own immediate necessities such defense articles as the president should consider would best serve our own interest."

Fiscal Adjustment
At the same time the committee re-drafted a section which would permit the president to transfer funds in the bill to departments which dispose of defense materials.

The committee noted that the amount carried in the bill plus authority in the basic law to dispose of a maximum of 1 billion 300 million dollars worth of existing materials made the total available for British aid 8 billion 300 million dollars.

Banquet for Sen. Spencer on Thursday

Albert Graves in Charge of Program; to Begin at 7:30 o'Clock

Short talks by neighbors and friends of Senator Spencer will feature the program at the banquet Thursday night, honoring the senator-designate on the eve of his departure to Washington, where he will take up his duties as junior senator from Arkansas, filling out the unexpired term of Senator John E. Miller, who recently resigned to accept a place on the federal bench.

Gov. Adkins to Speak
The highlight of the program, however, will be a talk by Governor Homer M. Adkins, who appointed Senator Spencer. Governor Adkins is now in Washington but will return for this occasion. Senator Spencer maintains that since he is neither an orator nor a politician, he will decline to promise his friends "the world with a fence around it" but confine his remarks to an expression of appreciation for this tribute to him by his friends.

Guy E. Basye, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will preside at the meeting, and will introduce Albert Graves, who has charge of the program. All the members of the board of directors of the Hope Chamber of Commerce will act as a reception committee and are asked to be at the Hotel Barlow promptly at 6:45 p. m., as the banquet is scheduled to start at 7:30.

The committee on arrangements is disappointed in not being able to have present on this occasion Senator John E. Miller, who is attending a banquet in his honor on that night at Searcy, and also in not having Judge Harry J. Lemley, who is holding court in Eastern Arkansas.

On the Program
Among those who will make short talks on the program are: Judge W. Kendall Lemley, C. C. Spragins, Roy Anderson, O. A. Graves and Robert Wilson.

These are old friends of Senator Spencer and have promised to "fill all" on this occasion. Even his claims as a fisherman will be thoroughly reported on. These short talks will no doubt prove highly informational.

Negroes Ask Equal Salaries

High Court Decision My Cost Million a Year

LITTLE ROCK—A major social upheaval would be required if Arkansas follows directions of the Supreme Court of the United States to pay Negro teachers the same salaries paid to white instructors in public schools, Education Commissioner Ralph B. Jones said Monday.

Following the recent decision, Mr. Jones said, he received a petition signed by about 400 negroes asking that their salary scale be increased to the level paid to white teachers. He said the petition "was in the form of a demand."

The state chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, with headquarters in Pine Bluff, has been "particularly active" in the last two months, the commissioner disclosed. The petition, sent from Pine Bluff, contained signatures of negroes who live at Pine Bluff, El Dorado, Lewisville and Magnolia.

"Sooner or later some recognition of the problem must be made," Mr. Jones said. "We have been conscious of the situation for years. Arkansas is just as anxious as any other state to extend adequate educational facilities to negroes, but the financial resources of Arkansas are rather meager compared to those of some other states."

"The only immediate solution would be a federal subsidy."

"School leaders in Arkansas have discussed the problem in recent conferences. If salaries must be the same, it will be necessary to reduce those of white teachers."

"But as long as the major portion of school revenue is obtained by local taxation, I imagine the various school districts will solve their own problems."

Supplies Are Streaming Into Greece's Ports

AP Correspondent Actually Sees Mastery of Mediterranean

BELGRADE—(AP)—The British are continuing to unload supplies—anti-aircraft guns, searchlights and sound detectors—at several Greek ports, advisers received here in a diplomatic message from Athens said Tuesday night.

These are for an army of 300,000 men Britain is said in diplomatic sources to be mobilizing in Greece.

Britain, according to this information, is concentrating now on defense of Greek mainland ports and on preparing communication lines and air fields against Nazi formal attacks when the "back yard of Europe" battle finally breaks out.

By LARRY ALLEN
ABOARD A BRITISH CRUISER
—Britain's war fleet, demonstrating anew the control of the Mediterranean, has escorted some of the largest convoys of the war from central and eastern Mediterranean ports to Greece without a trace of enemy interference.

Tankers and freighters of every description loaded with important war supplies and British and Allied forces splashed through the Mediterranean and Aegean with our armed escort.

(British censors apparently did not permit confirmation of reports that troops were moving into Greece.)

The convoy frequently sailed within a few miles of the Italian shore. Several alarms were sounded during the passage but no raid materialized.

"Passage of the convoy was a new and striking illustration of the British force upon the seas."

Factories Set Safety Record

But One Minor Injury in Local Plants in February

February showed the least number of accidents in Hope's leading industrial plants since the beginning of the Industrial Safety Program. Only one minor injury was reported, causing a loss of thirty-one man-hours out of more than 100 thousand man-hours worked during that period.

Interest is growing every month in this program and managers of other plants in Hope who are not at present participating have indicated a desire to join.

The program is primarily designed to protect the lives and limbs of the men and women who work in these plants, but it is also in the interest of the owners of the plants, since accidents not only cost money in time lost and doctor and hospital bills of those who are actually injured, but they also reduce the efficiency and lower the morale of other workers.

February report was as follows:
Hope Heading Company, 6,706 working hours, no accident no hours lost.
Union Compress & Warehouse Co., 6,047, no accidents, no hours lost.
Temple Cotton Oil Co., 7,950, no accidents, no hours lost.

Bruner Ivory Handle Co., 31,650, one accident, 31 hours lost.
Hope Basket Co., 24,320, no accident, no hours lost.

Gunter Lumber Co., 20,228, no accident, no hours lost.

Woman Shot Accidentally

Miss Carrie Young, Bodcaw, Struck in Neck

Miss Carrie Baker, 22, of near Bodcaw, was seriously injured here Tuesday when a shot from a 32 automatic revolver struck her in the neck while she was making a purchase at the Gunter Hatchery in the old Southern Grain building on Louisiana street.

Otto Smith, an auto repair shop some 400 feet east of the hatchery on Fifth street. The bullet went through the wall of the repair shop, sped west to the hatchery, glanced off a tin sign, and went through a glass window, striking Miss Baker in the neck.

Smith was cleaning the gun when it discharged.

Dr. Jim Martindale, attending physician, said the bullet lodged in Miss Baker's neck. He said that her condition is satisfactory now but added the lodged bullet could cause serious complications.

Local, state and county officers investigated the accident which remained a mystery until the bullet was traced to the auto shop. On arrival at the shop officers said Smith was still working on the revolver unaware of what had happened.

Second Big Fire in New Orleans

Million-Dollar Gulf Oil Plant Is Damaged

NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—The second big fire in this area within a week Tuesday swept through the main office of the one-million-dollar Gulf Oil Refining company in adjoining Jefferson parish.

The amount of damage was not immediately determined.

Drums of gasoline and lubricating oil exploded like giant firecrackers as firemen fought the flames to save 1/2 million gallons of gasoline stored in nearby tanks.

Thirty drums of gasoline and 65 drums of lubricating oil, each containing about 55 gallons, were in the burning building.

The Gulf Refining company plant is just outside the city limits. Officers expressed the belief the fire started from sparks from a loading truck.

Equalization Gets Big Fund

Legislation Sponsored by Weisenberger and Others

LITTLE ROCK—A total of $149,600.96 was released for the school equalizing fund when Governor Adkins signed two legislative bills last week, enabling the State Department of Education to release vouchers on the equalizing fund totaling $121,708.78 Monday.

The vouchers had been written February 18, after the Supreme Court upheld the present distribution of the state land sales fund, challenged in a suit filed by Mike McCulling, Stuttgart taxpayer. Their release was delayed when a motion for a rehearing was filed.

The rehearing question is pending but Acts Nos. 131 and 132 of 1941 immediately provided enough money for the vouchers to be issued.

Act No. 131 (H. B. No. 500) transfers funds in the sanatorium building funds the equalizing fund. Act No. 132 (H. B. No. 533) amended the Nyberg liquor and wine tax law to permit a transfer of funds from the sanatorium building fund to the Welfare Department (old age pensions) and equalizing fund.

Additional funds will be available under these acts until June 30.

The legislation was introduced by Representatives Weisenberger of Hempstead county, Wright of Clark, Caviness of Yell, Spencer of Craighead, Buchanan of Nevada, Shaw of Poinsett and Hedges of St. Francis.

It is expected that these funds, with additional revenues anticipated if the Supreme Court reaffirms its ruling on the land sales fund, will enable the state to make full payments on allocations of $18 per pupil in attendance and $12 per pupil transported, for the current year.

British Ships Sunk Near U. S. Says Churchill

But Germans Deny Sending Long-Distance U-Boat Over Here

LONDON—(AP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill said Tuesday "not only German U-Boats but German battle-cruisers have crossed to the U. S. side of the Atlantic and have already sunk some of our independently routed ships, not sailing in convoy."

Churchill said the German war vessels had sunk ships as far west as the 42nd meridian—about 1,500 miles east of New York—on the American side of the Atlantic.

(The prime minister's statement did not make it clear whether he was speaking of reports Tuesday in Washington that the U. S. government had been informed that a German submarine had been sent to hurry shipping on the American side, or whether he was referring to events in the past.)

Authoritative quarters described as untrue reports from Washington that British Ambassador Lord Halifax had given the state department information regarding the reported dispatch of a German submarine to the western Atlantic.

Halifax Told It
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, said Tuesday he had been told by Viscount Halifax, the British ambassador, that the British had received reports a German submarine had been reported in North Atlantic waters.

In answer to questions, Welles said that in view of the considerable publicity given the question he would recite the facts.

Late Monday, he related, the British ambassador told him that the British navy had informed the American navy it had reports that a German submarine had reached waters somewhere off the Atlantic coast.

Welles said he had no information that German battle-cruisers were in the Atlantic and again referred all questions to the Navy for such information.

(The White House, State Department, Navy and other interested government agencies in Washington were silent regarding the source of the information. Sen. Wheeler, Dem., Mont., asserted, however, that it came from Lord Halifax.)

(The report received in Washington was that at least one of Germany's U-boat fleet is heading across the Atlantic under orders to operate off the American coast line where undersea raiders sent 65 vessels to the bottom in World war days.)

The details of the government's information were an official secret and the exact character of the submarine's mission was not indicated.)

3 Submarines Sunk
At the same time Churchill announced the "certain destruction" Monday of three German submarines in the continuing battle of the Atlantic, which he described as "one of the most momentous ever fought in all the annals of war."

The prime minister spoke at a Pilgrims luncheon at which he introduced John Winant, U. S. ambassador to Britain, who promised the British ships, planes and guns "with the utmost speed in the greatest volume and with all the skill" at the command of the American people.

"Only yesterday I received the news of the certain destruction of three U-boats," Churchill told his audience. "Not since October 1939 have I been cheered by such a triple event."

Germans Deny It
BERLIN—(AP)—Authorized sources said Tuesday reports of an alleged German long-distance U-boat being en route to C. S. waters were a "put up job by American war-influencers."

They said that while ordinarily no information is given on military matters they did not hesitate to label this report "clumsy propaganda."

They called it an "empty by the munitions industry to create war panic in the U. S. and observe 'we are not so naive as to attack the U. S. with a U-boat.'"

Germans Sink 5 Ships
BERLIN—(AP)—A German submarine has sunk five armed merchantmen totaling 35,300 tons out of a British convoy, the German high command reported Tuesday.

Another merchantman of 4,000 tons was sunk during an armed German air reconnaissance over the North sea east of Newcastle, the daily war bulletin added.

In Newcastle itself, it said, port and dock facilities were bombed Monday night and other air attacks were directed against ports on the Scottish east coast.

Four barrage balloons were said to have been shot down over Dover.

Fresh White Collars for Sale

Just as there is a bright side even to afflictions like appendicitis or a tonsillotomy, so there is a bright side to some of the rough ride the American people has had during the past dozen years.

Something unhealthy and slyly subversive of real Americanism was growing up in the twenties. It was the desperate desire of every family to bring its sons up into white collar positions. This brought a sort of cleavage of the population into two classes—those who wore white collars and those who didn't.

If ever there was a false basis for division, that was it. Yet families slaved and struggled, denied themselves everything, so that their sons might achieve a job pushing a pen-icil or pen instead of working with their hands. Thousands of young men, often ill-qualified, fought their way through college or high school for no better reason than that it seemed to promise later light work at high pay.

That philosophy was fair neither to higher education, nor to American life, nor to the young men. For the primary purpose of education ought not to be to prepare one for a "good job," but to bring about a better adjustment of a man to life, to give him a greater appreciation of its rich and varied phases. Such objectives are no less valuable to a machinist than to a bank teller. And under to more likely to have time and leisure to develop the cultural side of life than the teller.

People began finding that out after the depression struck. Young men and women with high school educations or better found that the white-collar jobs for which they had planned did not exist. They went into the textile and steel mills, into the truck cabs and shops.

And to the surprise of many of them, they found, first, that it was not as bad a life as they had been led to believe, and second, that they were all the better mill-hands, drivers, or machinists because of their education.

The whole "white-collar culture" of the twenties is now in disfavor, and the boom in defense industries now draws thousands more from desk to lathe. More and more of the future seems to be going over to the engineers, the chemists, the architects, the skilled workmen. Real brains and brain work will always be at a premium, but a white collar just for a white collar's sake no longer looks as good as it used to.

Old and artificial divisions and classifications are breaking down, and a good thing, too. True Americans will wear no man's collar but their own, nor will they be as greatly influenced in the future as in the past by its color.

YESTERDAY: The girl, Toby Masters, in a certain beauty and a job at Huntington's. Beatrice introduces herself as Bee Davis, unemployed stenographer. She tells Toby that she has been locked out of her room, that her cash reserve in the "last ditch" fund, Toby insists that she come to the apartment. Toby, with another working girl, Vera, and a man, who is a "who are you?"

CHAPTER VII

THE apartment was on the fourth floor of a walk-up in Flatbush. As Toby Masters turned the key in the lock, she told Beatrice gaily, "We have to be careful not to get up on a chair too suddenly, or we knock each other down."

But when the door opened, Beatrice saw that the apartment had been lovingly decorated. There was a studio couch doing duty as a sofa. It was covered in gay, flowered linen.

"I made that myself. Remnants from Huntington's, at employee discount," Toby explained.

There were two club chairs, "Reduced," said Toby. There was a long table with a radio, magazines, a cigarette box and a really handsome lamp.

"Here's the kitchenet." It had been managed out of a closet. Shelves held dishes, pots, a canister of coffee, a tiny bread box. Underneath was a tiny sink, a two-burner gas stove, and a little cabinet hung above the stove. "That's our grocery cupboard. Spaghetti, canned soup, other stuff we keep for the end of the week when we're broke. . . ."

"I think it's lovely," Beatrice said.

"Wait till you see our bedroom!" Their bedroom was smaller, it possible, than the living room. Two narrow, headless beds and a tall chest of drawers crowded it so that they barely navigated from door to door. "The beds are simply twin mattresses on twin springs with legs. Clever, huh? The chest belongs to Vera, so I contributed the full-length mirror on the closet door instead of a bureau."

VERA, it developed, had already arrived. "But it's her night to get dinner. I suppose she ran down to the corner for something."

"I hate to inconvenience you," Beatrice murmured. "Perhaps your friend isn't going to like my being here. . . ."

"Vera? You don't know her! Why, last winter, a reporter friend of hers—a male, mind you—spent weeks on that studio couch, while I locked out door every night with a key from the five-and-ten, and put on my winter coat every morning to navigate to the bathroom!"

Beatrice couldn't help laughing. She was still laughing when the door opened, and a tall, amazingly beautiful girl with coal black hair walked in.

Toby cried, "Vera, where have you been? Not even a package? Do you mean to say you didn't start dinner?"

"Of course, I didn't start dinner. I have seven cents, exactly. I forgot to mention it this morning."

"Well, where have you been?"

"Walking around the block with Terry."

Toby turned to Beatrice. "Terry is one of Vera's insinuates. He's a photographer, without a grain of common sense. He spends his money for films, flash bulbs, chemicals and $100 cameras, on the installment plan. And right now, he's downstairs waiting for Vera to get me talked around to inviting him up here for dinner. Isn't that it, Vera? You have seven cents and Terry's probably got one."

Vera sank down into a chair and stretched out her long, lovely legs. "As a matter of fact, Toby, that's it. I thought maybe he had some money, so I phoned him, but—"

"You thought maybe he had some money?" Toby's sarcasm was devastating. "Well, go on down and haul him up here. No, wait. Here's a dollar. Send him around to the delicatessen, first."

Beatrice opened her handbag. "Toby, let me. After all, I'm the one who—"

"Yes, I forgot to tell you," Toby put in, carelessly, to Vera. "This is Bee Davis, she's spending the night with us. I'm taking her down to the store in the morning to see about a job."

Beatrice handed $2 to Vera. Vera stared down at the money. "Lady, are you cracked? Do you think we're feeding a regiment? There's just four of us, you know, and potato salad at 20 cents a pound, and bologna at 20."

Toby dived for the money. "Don't take it. It's her last ditch fund!"

"But I've crossed the ditch. I've practically got a job!" Beatrice insisted.

Vera said, "All right. We'll celebrate. Spiced beef and pickled herring. What kind of cake do you like?"

"Cheese cake," said Toby. "That's expensive."

IT was a gay, completely informal meal. They ate off a wobbly card table set up in the living room. Vera made the coffee, and everybody helped to unwrap the delicatessen packages and slap them down on plates. Beatrice had never in her life eaten spiced beef, pickled herring, hard rolls, potato salad and sour green tomatoes. But she found them delicious.

Terry ate enormously, confiding between mouthfuls, "Had no lunch." After his second cup of coffee, he tilted back the spindly bridge chair and remarked, "What a harem! Three beautiful girls and all for me! I wish I had the price of a movie, kids."

"But instead," said Vera, "you have some films to develop. I feel it coming on. Eat and run, that's you."

"Well, yes. As a matter of fact. . . ."

Vera got up and threw his hat at him. "Get out of here! Pig!"

Toby leaped to her feet. "Wait a minute. There's the little matter of dishes, my boy."

Terry hunched his broad shoulders and shivered. "Dishes!" Then his eye lighted on Beatrice. "Hey, I'm not the only guest around here. Make her help me!"

The dishwater in her fingers, watching him expertly dunking a cup into hot soapy water, Beatrice realized that this was the first time in her life she had ever actually helped with this task that inevitably followed every meal she had ever eaten. She was clumsy, and she sneered at her. "Don't dab! Wipe!"

He took the towel out of her hand, at last. "A fine wife you'll make some miserable man. Go on in there and decorate the sofa. At least, you're good at that."

His eyes narrowed. "You know, I keep having the feeling that I've seen you before. Somewhere. That little tilt to your chin—the way you wear your hair—You remind me of something. It's vaguely swimming around in the back of my head. Some kind of an opulent scene goes with it—I can't think."

"You must be mistaken," she heard herself saying coolly. "I've never seen you before in my life."

"Yes, yes, I know. But I've seen you. I used to be a publicity cameraman, you know. Montauk Point, Miami Beach, Palm Springs—swell resort hotels—"

"That must account for the opulent scenes," said Beatrice. "You've got me mixed up with someone else."

Terry's eyes were still narrowed and speculative. "Maybe. But who's the gal I've got you mixed up with?"

'City of Angels' Is Action Packed Novel of Filmland Fables

Rupert Hughes points a finger at Hollywood—its flash, foibles and fakes
—and laughs in his new novel, "City of Angels" (Scribner's; $2.50), and smothers his chuckles in a story packed with action and romance. The novelist was never better than in this tale of a handsome lifeguard who became Movieland's greatest glamor boy almost overnight.

Warren Thurnburn was handsome as a 1940 Greek god. Josefa Ranleigh knew it, when she saw him on his lifeguard's perch on a Los Angeles beach. And Josefa loved him for his handsomeness. The world knew it when he pulled blubbering, paunchy Ranleigh out of a rip tide and dropped him on the front page.

It was too good a bet for the movies to miss. Before Thurnburn had fully grasped the fact that he had saved the life of Ranleigh the Realtor, a talent scout was rushing him to a studio, getting his name on a contract.
And the movies had a new star.

He couldn't act, but that didn't matter to the thousands of romance-hungry fans who toppled other idols.

set up the new deity. He didn't know what it was all about, but he didn't have to. The studio did his thinking, arranged his affairs, even made his dates and directed his romances.

They ran into a bit of trouble there, for Warren was already in love with Alexandra. Josefa was still trailing him, aided by a grateful and blind husband. And Tanya Morgan, the screen star movie moguls picked for his publicly heart throb, had too much sense to become seriously involved in a hand-picked love affair.

Being the screen's favorite had its advantages. Warren discovered. He paid off the family mortgage, put money in the bank. But a public le-fiddle, he also learned, when rivals turned him from a No. 1 hero to a No. 1 heel, more than slightly on the effeminate side.

Hughes rescues his hero from personal disaster and the fate of film's first lover, but he takes a spell of "unusual" weather and an attendant flood to do it. There's enough action crammed into the closing chapters to satisfy any thrill-hunter.

In all, "City of Angels" is good fun, and grand reading.

British Royal Ladies Help

England's First Family Aids by Doing Without

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Feature Service Writer

The women of England's royal family are helping fight the war by going without things.

The fashion-plate Duchess of Kent is giving less time to clothes and has bought at least one bargain basement hat. Little Princess Margaret Rose went without frosting on her birthday cake. Queen Mary has substituted west country elder for wine. Queen Elizabeth seems to have cut down orders for her voluminous wardrobe and is wearing clothes she has had for some time. The Duchess of Gloucester has closed York House in London and has moved to the country. The Princess Royal (King George's sister) made headlines by giving a pint of blood at a transfusion center where she was enrolled as No. 7,743. And they all are pruning their menus to conform with wartime food restrictions.

The quartet that belongs to the king's generation is immersed in war work, and all except the queen appear frequently in military uniforms. Despite the war and the fact that she is Commandant-in-Chief of the women's army, navy and air services, Queen Elizabeth continues to wear the light colored ensembles she has always favored. She will probably continue to do so, for Queen Mary is said to have tutored her for royal family duties since she was Duchess of York and the dowager queen is credited with the belief that a queen must dress with a distinction which sets her apart from the crowd. (That lets uniforms out.)

Elizabeth's days are crowded with wartime activities. She works long hours, visits hospitals, police stations and bombed areas with her gas mask swinging from her arm. She takes constant care to safeguard the king's comfort and health, inspects and encourages English women in war work and runs Britain's largest household. And she has kept her famous smile.

The pretty Duchess of Gloucester, wife of the king's eldest brother, has a series of jobs which keep her busy six days a week. As air commandant of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force she frequently appears in the air force blue uniform and gold edged cap and travels constantly to inspect air women's activities. She is also Colonel in Chief of the King's Own Scottish Borders. Besides this she gives a good deal of time to hospital tours, tying up parcels for prisoners of war and dealing with the heavy family mailbag.

Like many other British families whose husbands are soldiers, the Gloucesters closed their big London house. The duchess lives at Burnwell Manor in Northamptonshire. When the duke gets one of his rare leaves, she comes to London to join him for a few days' holiday in the Buckingham Palace suite the king puts at their disposal.

The Duchess of Kent seems to be giving less time to social activities and clothes than she did in the days when her costumes made fashion history. Recently she went into a bargain basement and bought a hat for $1.45. These days she is generally dressed simply in black or in the navy blue uniform she wears as Commandant of the Women's Royal Naval Service. She visits hospitals, depots and canteens and has completed a 50-hour nurse training course. The Kents closed their big London house and are making wartime headquarters in a smaller one. Their two children live in the country.

Princess Mary is Chief Commandant of the Women's Auxiliary Territorial Service, the women's branch of the army. She is also interested in transfusion centers and recently made a broadcast launching a campaign at Leeds for 100,000 blood donors.

For safety's sake Queen Mary and the two little princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, are living in the country, well outside London's danger zone. The girls take part in Girl Scout activities and are studying history, foreign relations, sewing, singing, piano, languages and cooking. Recently the princesses headed a war savings drive. Margaret Rose bought the first of a new issue of war savings certificates and Elizabeth the first five-pound ($20) defense bond.

Weather Men Draw 6-Month Duty Tour on a Desert Island

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—For the next six months New Orleans will be the food pipeline to two men shut up on a little Caribbean island, a thousand miles away, to do a job for Uncle Sam.

The men, Neil B. Ward, 26, and George Grover, 25, are United States Weather Bureau workers. On Swan Island, 100 miles northeast of Honduras, they will make observations and supply surface and upper air data on the temperature, pressure and wind. Both volunteered for the job.

The island, where ships stop only at six-week intervals, is uninhabited except for a few occasional native visitors. Personal messages by radio can be sent through the same channels as weather reports. United Fruit Company ships will take the men fresh food regularly from New Orleans. They reached the island late in February.

Italians Driven Back in Africa

British Beat Off Counter-Attack by Fascists

CAIRO.—(AP)—Italian counter-attacks against positions recently captured in Eritrea have been repulsed with heavy fascist losses, British general headquarters declared Tuesday.

The British said the Italians left over 800 prisoners in their hands. (This, presumably, was at Cherch, mountain stronghold barring the British way toward Asmara, the capital of Eritrea, and Massaua, its chief port. The British command said Monday that important heights outside Cherch had been taken.)

(The Rome war bulletin also reported Italian counter-attacks and said both sides had suffered heavy losses.)

Look at America

By NORMAN CHANDLER
Chairman, Newspaper Publishers Committee

WE'RE ON OUR OWN.

We'll sink or swim, here in America, depending on whether we are competent, able to solve our own problems.

The dictators say democracy won't work—too inefficient. The very word "democracy" is under fire. Today, our form of government faces a challenge as serious as it did when the 13 colonies united.

Well, not quite. We are forty-eight strong and well united states now. We have a large share of all the world's wealth. We have discovered and developed an astounding number of resources. We have scientists, thinkers, doers to spare. We have skills and arts and traditions and experiences now.

We have used up the wilderness, but we've replaced it with a thousand new frontiers. Four or five years ago a Yale professor, C. C. Furnas, wrote a book called "The Next Hundred Years." In that book he pointed out the pitiful little strip of knowledge we have mapped and the vast areas of wilderness and ignorance ahead of us.

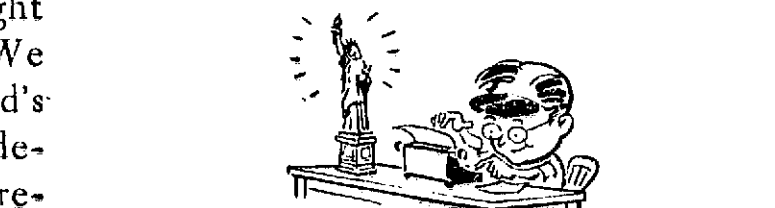

When he wrote that book we had not yet discovered sulfanilimide and its chemical relatives. Probably that drug has already saved more human lives than the War of the Revolution cost!

Atomic energy, with thousands of times the energy of gasoline, was a dream five years ago. It is only a possibility today, but it is already newspaper news—a step nearer; perhaps very close.

It is up to us in America today to create our own style, develop our own art, try out our own tastes.

Are we efficient enough? Can we do it? We can if we keep free our means of communication and expression.

If progress—and failure—can be reported without hindrance, if the things men do—in politics and sociology and science and business—can be discussed, compared and weighed, we shall have a great era of progress—greater than all the progress that has gone before.

And all we need, to guarantee that freedom to grow, is a strong and fearless press. Need? We do not need to create such a press. We need only to keep it. You are reading a sample of it this moment.

We need only to appreciate it, conserve it, defend it, keep it free.

NOTE: The Newspaper Publishers Committee, composed of over 350 leading American Newspapers, publishes these messages simultaneously each week. The force which unites these newspapers is their recognition of their responsibility to you, the reader.
